

The TimberWolf

WOLVES SUFFER TOUGH LOSS AT THE HANDS OF KITCHENER

The Timber Wolves were on the ice Sunday afternoon against Kitchener Red for their third game in three days. It was a tough battle from the start, with Kitchener taking the lead midway through the first on a power play. Just 2 minutes later, Kitchener made it 2-0 on a 2 on 1, putting the puck just past the skate of Matthew Fazzari's outstretched leg. The Timber Wolves had some good chances to get on the board at the end of the first but were stymied by the Kitchener goalie and the cross bar. The second period saw Kitchener go ahead by 3 on a partial breakaway but the Timber Wolves kept working, trying to get on the scoreboard. The third period was a chippy affair, with the physical play intensifying. The Wolves D was down to 5 after an injury to Aaron Jeffrey but the D kept the Rangers at bay for most of the third. Kitchener took a 4 minute head checking penalty on a rough play against Ben Hagen on the boards. That sparked the Timber Wolves and saw Noah Zettler bang in a rebound from a Liam Read shot, with a second assist going to Blake Rendall on the power play. Although the Wolves applied pressure in the latter stages of the third period, that would be as close as they would come. Great effort boys!

PLAYER OF THE GAME

Pascal Prior #68 is not a boy of many words but rather lets his play on the ice speak for itself. Pascal is a major reason why his line is on fire right now! Pascal was in the corner toughing it out with the Kitchener defense all afternoon. He almost always came out with the puck, readily feeding his line mates in front of the net and at the point for quality goal scoring chances. Great work Pascal! When Pascal isn't charging his way full speed down the ice, he can be found trying to set up a game of Quidditch in his back yard, much like in his favourite Harry Potter movies. Pascal goes to Lexington Public school where he is a popular student and enjoys math. His favourite NHL team is the Winnipeg Jets and favourite NHL player is Jonathan Toews.

THE NEW SPOKESMEN FOR COMPOSITE HOCKEY STICKS.

